In October of 1910, the New York Giants and the New York Yankees faced off in a best-of-seven exhibition series. In appreciation of Christy Mathewson's dominating performance, his Giants teammates gave the beloved pitcher this gold watch. Over a century later, "Matty" still holds New York/San Francisco Giants records for wins (372), strikeouts (2,504) and shutouts (79).

Willie McCovey wore these shoes in 1980, the last of his 22 seasons in the big leagues. The first baseman spent 19 years in San Francisco, collecting 1,974 hits, 469 homers and 1,388 RBI with the franchise.

3

A key member of the Giants rotation for 14 seasons, Juan Marichal won more games in the 1960s than any other major league pitcher (191). "The Dominican Dandy" wore this cap in 1969, the season he led the big leagues with a 2.10 ERA.

4

Giants catcher Buster Posey wore this mask throughout the 2010 World Series. The eventual NL Rookie of the Year guided San Francisco's pitching staff as they beat the Rangers four games to one, winning the franchise's sixth modern World Championship.

5

San Francisco's Barry Bonds wore this helmet on August 7, 2007, when he hit his 756th homer, passing Hank Aaron as the all-time home run king. The Giants outfielder retired at the end of the season with a still-standing record of 762 round-trippers.

6

During the 2014 World Series, San Francisco's Madison Bumgarner started and won two games, then earned a five-inning save in Game 7 to secure the Championship. "Mad Bum" wore this cap in the Series, posting a 0.43 ERA and winning the World Series MVP Award.

7

In Game 1 of the 1954 World Series, Giants center fielder Willie Mays used this glove to rob Cleveland's Vic Wertz of a 460-foot extra-base hit: an over-the-shoulder play known simply as "The Catch." The Giants went on to sweep the Indians, capturing the franchise's last championship in New York before the team moved to San Francisco.

8

During a 14-inning matchup against Miami on August 8, 2016, Brandon Crawford became the first Giants player to collect seven hits in a game. He used this bat during his offensive onslaught, including a 14th-inning single that scored teammate Brandon Belt, giving San Francisco the lead and, eventually, the win.

Gaylord Perry signed with the San Francisco Giants organization as a 19-year-old in 1958, and went on to make his big league debut with the team four years later. The right-handed hurler amassed 134 wins and 1,606 strikeouts during his 10 seasons with the team, earning this plaque in 1991 when the veteran of 22 big league seasons was inducted into the Hall of Fame.
